

For the purpose of this letter, the actual name has been replaced with “Candidate”.

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am the Social Studies teacher at Liceum Ogólnokształcące nr 2 in Warsaw. I am writing to recommend Candidate for the bachelor in International Relations. I have taught Candidate for the last two years and have had many opportunities to observe their development, work habits, and growing interest in political and international matters. From the beginning it was visible to me that Candidate is a disciplined and dependable student who takes their education seriously.

During lessons, Candidate always comes prepared and shows that they follow political life not only from the textbook but also from newspapers and online sources. Their Extended Essay on youth participation in Polish elections was written with care and showed that Candidate understands both theoretical concepts and real social tendencies. They analysed why young people vote less often and used examples from recent elections in Poland, which was a very impressive work. Candidate also takes part in our European Youth Club, where they help with organising small debates, short presentations, and discussions connected with EU institutions, climate policy, and civic engagement.

In addition to regular school activities, Candidate has also been active in Model United Nations. They prepared position papers, took part in negotiations, and represented our school at two MUN conferences, where they showed strong interest in diplomacy and international cooperation. Their participation helped them improve their confidence in public speaking and their ability to express arguments in a clear and respectful way.

Candidate also had the opportunity to study abroad through two Erasmus+ exchanges — one in Germany and one in Italy. These experiences helped them become more independent and open-minded. They adapted well to living in another country, meeting students from different cultures, and working on group projects in a foreign environment. When they returned, I noticed a visible improvement in their communication skills and general maturity.

Candidate is calm, polite, and able to cooperate well with others. They complete tasks on time, listen carefully, and have a tremendous amount of international experience already, which makes me certain that they will do well while studying abroad too.

If you need any additional information, I will gladly provide it.
