

Business has impacted my life on various levels. Coming from Geographic Region, I am particularly aware of the impact that liberation of business can have on the course of history. As a child of parents who lived through the transformation, my early life was filled with stories about exponential change and financial freedom. Indeed, my role model in the field is my mom. As a businessowner, she empowers herself and the community around her, taking charge of decisions and fighting for what is hers. It is her work and determination which inspired me to follow her footsteps in my journey.

Nonetheless, my passion for business is not only determined externally but also intrinsically. Businesses exemplify the impact that individual freedom may have on a wider collective community. In a sense, they externalize the unique blend of a creative mindset and natural leadership that characterises my personality. On one hand, I am a firm believer in taking responsibility for my decisions, taking charge of projects and initiatives around me. On the other, my creativity seeks to find alternative perspectives on a given situation.

Throughout my education, I have carefully taken decisions to better equip myself for a career in business. Hence, I purposely chose one of the few schools in Location that offered IB and, within it, business management as a subject. Even further, the particular mix of subjects I have chosen are all crafted to provide me with a solid foundation on business. Indeed, courses such as mathematics, English and visual arts are necessary to succeed in our interconnected, multicultural, and aesthetics-driven world.

However, my pursuit is not solely limited to academics. I have consistently engaged in leadership projects seeking to change the world around me. In Year, I voiced my opinion on Event led by Location and Location schools as part of UNESCO's Associated Schools Network (ASPnet). Similarly, in the Project I contributed to the organisation of interviews and presentations which ultimately led to our commendation as a "School of Excellence".

Besides leadership, I share the desire to connect with others – an indispensable soft skill in business. Indeed, I took part in the Campaign to collect donations for orphanages in Location. After a successful launch in Year, we re-ran the campaign for two further years, making the project akin to a school tradition. Beyond this, I have participated in multiple exchanges offered by Erasmus+ in Country and Country. Whilst these opportunities have been personally enriching, I have also participated in various conferences and meetings which bring international communities together in times of need. For example, in Project I spread awareness about war e to students from Countries and beyond.

Lastly, the most recognizable feature of my personality is my willingness to take bold but calculated risks, a trait I've prominently demonstrated in sports. From my dedication to the Club, where precision and focus are paramount, to the adrenaline-fueled motorbiking, I've learned to navigate challenges with resilience and determination. Additionally, my passion for surfing has not only allowed me to ride the waves but also to rise to the occasion by standing on the podium in a regional competition. These experiences shaped my character and instilled in me the drive to approach my business degree with the same level of commitment, determination, and fearlessness.
