

For the purpose of this letter, the actual name has been replaced with “Candidate” and company replaced with “Company Name”.

I am writing as the former supervisor of Candidate at [Company Name], where they completed a four month internship on our Operations and Process Design team. I oversaw Candidate directly on two client projects and had the opportunity to assess their work. Although they joined the team with limited practical experience, Candidate adjusted quickly to our internal structure and demonstrated a consistent, disciplined work ethic throughout their internship.

Candidate’s main assignment involved supporting our engagement with one of our clients, a logistics firm, undergoing a restructuring of its warehouse allocation model. Candidate assisted in mapping existing workflows, interviewing staff, and assembling a dataset used to identify bottlenecks in their picking and packing procedure. One contribution worth noting was Candidate’s development of a worksheet that helped our team monitor daily changes in operational output. It proved reliable and was incorporated into the final recommendation package delivered to the client.

In addition, Candidate participated in an internal initiative evaluating the efficiency of our own knowledge-management system. They were responsible for reviewing archived project materials and proposing a revised tagging scheme for our document repository. Their review was thorough, and several of their organisational recommendations were adopted by our team already. Candidate approached these tasks with steady attention to detail and a willingness to seek clarification when necessary, which helped maintain accuracy in their work.

Throughout their time at [Company Name], Candidate conducted themselves professionally, accepted feedback constructively, and showed clear improvement as they became more familiar with our processes. Based on their performance and their ability to adapt to a demanding consulting environment, I am confident that Candidate is well prepared for the academic challenges of a master’s programme, especially in the field of Management. Should you need any further information, please feel free to contact me.