

For the purpose of this letter, the candidate's name was replaced with Candidate.

I am pleased to write this letter of recommendation for Candidate, who has served as an intern at Grant under my supervision. It is with great enthusiasm that I recommend Candidate for admission to the master's programme in Statistics at the University of St. Andrews.

During their tenure with us, Candidate has consistently demonstrated a strong work ethic, a passion for learning, and a remarkable ability to excel in a fast-paced and challenging environment. As an intern, Candidate quickly integrated into our team, and from the beginning was willing and able to take part in difficult projects.

Therefore, as early as their first week, she became an integral part of our Client Success team, where she was responsible for the final delivery of the product to our customers. As all of our clients had different problems which they sought to solve through our service, it required her to adapt quickly to the changing environment. Not only did Candidate able to keep up and deliver ahead of deadlines, but all tasks delegated to her were completed to the highest standard.

Furthermore, Candidate has proven to be an excellent communicator and a collaborative team player. She actively engaged in group discussions, contributed valuable insights, and demonstrated an ability to effectively articulate complex ideas. This was particularly important for the job she was doing, as very often difficult mathematical or statistical concepts had to be explained to individuals without any background in the subject. She did this effortlessly which made her an even more valuable addition to the team. Given our company's international profile, a big part of our team works remotely and come from a variety of places. Candidate quickly showed her multicultural awareness and proved to truly enjoy the international nature of the work she was providing. Therefore, I am sure that she will enjoy such opportunities also at your university.

Overall, I am confident that Candidate possesses the intellect, drive, and determination to thrive in the university's Statistics programme. I wholeheartedly recommend Candidate's application to the esteemed institution of the University of St. Andrews.
