

I have always loved philosophical questions. One that really fascinated me was "The Brain in the Jar". As I matured I started debating with others, and deepening my reading. The first book that caused a sensation in my life was Nietzsche's "Thus spoke Zarathustra". My IB subjects, particularly TOK and Psychology, also widened my philosophical knowledge. My TOK presentation on how ethics influences science was one of the most significant projects in my academic life. In IB Psychology we learned how the human mind, memory and senses work. I learned that humans are always curious, the human brain always wants to go beyond what is known, giving me another reason to choose Philosophy.

Politics is another passion, coming from my love of history. My interest in international relations and politics does not just come from school. Since I was a boy, I have always been in touch with foreign countries and their political situations. My father is a traveller, who lately finished his world expedition. Whenever he returned home I was fascinated by his tales, particularly of Libya and Cuba. When I was older, I joined a youth political group in my town, where young people can discuss domestic and foreign issues. I had a chance to meet Polish politicians, including the President of Kielce. IB History has helped me understand events of the past and IB Psychology to understand how societies and people work. In my spare time I read books of the great thinkers, like Marx or Machiavelli, which deepen my knowledge of politics and expand my critical thinking.

After high school I decided to take a gap year, and moved to China. It was a life-changing decision. My objective was to learn the language and gain work experience. On arrival I took up a successful internship at the Polish Consulate in Shanghai. Working there for a month gave me great insight into diplomacy. I had a chance to cooperate with and learn from Polish diplomats, which made me determined to study Politics. In September 2016 I was accepted at Shanghai University, where I am now studying Mandarin. I not only have the chance to study the language, but also to meet fascinating people from all over the world. This stay has also helped me to grow as a person. Living alone in such a large country, so different from Europe, has made me more mature, patient, confident and tolerant.

I am not only ambitious and hard working, but also open to reasoning and discussion. I enjoy solving problems and cooperating with others. At my high school, and at the University in Shanghai, most of my classmates are foreign students. This has helped me learn how to understand, respect and cooperate with different people, a crucial feature for one planning to study in such a multicultural area as the UK. I enjoy applying my debating skills, one of my strongest assets. I work hard at studying languages; I speak fluent English, Polish and am currently studying Chinese. One of my great hobbies is sport. Over recent years I have practiced judo, football, sea diving and parachuting. Over a year ago, I became a qualified ski instructor, able to teach at all levels. I am also passionate about volunteering. At high school I helped at a home for the elderly, as well as fundraising for an incurably sick boy in my hometown. I also helped organise the World Expedition of the Polish traveler's group

„Salutem“.

One of my main goals in the future is to work as a diplomat. I want to make the world a better place, free of wars and conflicts. I plan to join an international organisation like the United Nations or the EU, where I hope to do an internship and then work in the future.
